Description:

From the Author Hi all, please note: If you downloaded an earlier version of this book, you will encounter various spelling and grammar issues. Since original publication, it has been through an editor and a proof-reader, so 97% of those issues should have been taken care of (please re-download).

I also smoothed out the beginning scene since the humor and "grain of salt" with which I wrote it was mostly missed. Hindsight! :)

About the Author A wine country native, K.F. Breene moved to San Francisco for collage just shy of a decade ago to pursue a lifelong interest in film. As she settled into the vibrant city, it quickly became apparent that, while she thought making and editing films was great fun, she lacked cinematic genius. For that reason, her career path quickly changed direction. Her next goal was a strange childhood interest, conjured at the dining room table while filling out a form. For some reason, her young self wanted to be an Accountant. Thinking on it now, she often wonders how she had any friends. Regardless, it was the direction she finally took. While she could wrangle numbers with the best of 'em, and even though she wore the crown as the most outspoken, belligerent accountant in the world, her mind got as stuffy as her daily routine. It was here that she dusted off her creative hat and began writing.
