"Against both the timeless beauty and cutthroat attitudes that pervade China, Carner has created a page-turning, globe-spanning adventure." --Annie Blachley, Correspondent, The Los Angeles Times,

"Spicy and worldly, a journey through the intrigues of Chinese-American relations, corporate greed, and pop world machinations." --Susan Anderson, Author, "From Abandonment to Healing" and "Black Swan."

From the Publisher In addition to interviewing officers of the U.S. National Security Administration, State Department, CIA and Foreign Service, Ms. Carner's research for CHINA DOLL included traveling in China and speaking with women—university professors, industry directors, aging peasants and budding entrepreneurs—about their customs and apprehensions. She learned how, generation after generation, due to either lingering starvation, the social experiment of the cultural revolution, or the current sacrifice under the one-child policy, they have been losing their baby girls through coercion, prejudice, neglect—and outright murder.
